

Subject: Re: TJMC rundown.

Date: Tuesday, November 24, 2020 at 2:24:35 PM Central Standard Time

From: TJMC Journal

To: Jon Bekken

CC: Kalen Churcher, Lewis, Mitzi

[EXTERNAL]

Thanks Jon,

That last Book Review will hold over until next year, so take it off the rundown.

That annoys me about the table not being compatible....it's always a google doc problem. At any time just drop a note, and tell authors they can fix it next year.

Today I'll get my editor's comments to you. It is longer than usual so should be embedded where first para is shown and rest is "read more". Or designed as a download like the other articles. I think Mitzi can advise what works on our website.

Thanks again Jon. I really didn't expect you to get onto it so quickly. You are amazing.

Cathy

Kia Atawhai ma Kia Kaha

Dr. CR Strong
Massey University

On 25/11/2020, at 6:59 AM, Jon Bekken <jbekken@albright.edu> wrote:

There are still some outstanding proofs; the two problematic articles I identified have been fixed - one with the assistance of the authors, for the other I went online to correct/complete incorrect citations.

Three authors have raised minor issues which have been fixed, and another half-dozen have ok'd the proofs.

There is also one more review that may be coming in.

All I need to do is create a cover/table of contents - the work of about half an hour - and I can have everything ready for uploading.

Jon Bekken
Professor of Communications
Albright College

On Sat, Nov 21, 2020 at 10:23 PM Jon Bekken <jbekken@albright.edu> wrote:

| I have sent off proofs for all the articles I have in hand. If Ethics arrives in the next week, I can include it with the files for the issue.

Thus far about a third of authors have responded to their proofs.

We are having difficulty with Woman Authors. The tables embedded in the article as submitted reproduce poorly. I requested the originals, and was provided a Google Spreadsheet which has very different tables (piecharts instead of bar graphs, with a very limited color palette, and which do not organize the data at all in the same way). I have written the authors noting the issue. I suppose I could cut and paste the underlying data into a spreadsheet I am more familiar with, reorganizing the data to match the various figures, and then generate new tables. But this is more work than I prefer, and I am hoping the authors will come back with usable figures. (I might also be able to get a higher, but not high, quality image by screenshotting the tables from the submission; unfortunately Word does not appear to allow exporting images in a graphic format once they have been pasted into it.)

There are also some issues with incomplete references in Atkins et al., which hopefully the authors will be able to clear up.

Jon Bekken
Professor of Communications
Albright College

On Mon, Nov 16, 2020 at 5:58 PM TJMC Journal <journaltjmc@gmail.com> wrote:

CAUTION: This email originated from a Non-Albright email server. Please use caution when interacting and responding to the contents.

Jon (copy Mitzi and Kalen)

Whew, I'm just about finished with this next issue of TJMC. Below is the recommended run down of articles. You will see that one is not in yet, as the author Pam Perry only-just got a review copy of the book. However, we know she is good for it and will turn in camera-ready copy so I'm accepting it a bit later than the others. My intro copy is still to come.

I'm open to suggestions on the running order. I tried to break up the technical articles so they weren't all together. I sort-of ordered them in priority of my own interest, and how solid I thought the research was in each one.

Copy editing again was a problem. I got a hodgepodge of different quality and standard, so please make any corrections you happen to see. I have allowed the Tengku book review to use British English in the write up.

JON: How do you want these sent to you? I think in the past you didn't really didn't like a shared DROPBOX, so I can email them to you a few at a time. Let me know which works. Can you please send the proof to the authors for approval.....but don't let them bother you with tiny little second-thought edits. I've already told most that the designed proof was only for major errors they may find.

		TOPIC	AUTH
1Research	Ready for designer	Tik Tok	Todd

2	Research	READY FOR DESIGNER	Woman authors	Meg Horn
3	Research	Ready for designer	Internship Classroom	angel Jean
4	Research	Ready for Designer	DataViz Curriculum	Masu
5	Research	READY FOR DESIGNER	scholastic Journalism	Julie
6	Article	READY FOR DESIGNER	VR-360	Aaron Charles Nicol Medi Cren Mess Rodri Jenni Sadle Chica
7	Article	READY FOR DESIGNER	Voter Engagement
8	Article	Ready for Designer	Race Theory.
9	Article	READY FOR DESIGNER	Campus Reboot	Susar
10	Review	to come	Ethics, Cooper	Pam I
11	Review	Ready for Designer	the Peaceful Traveller, Trauer	Samil
12	Review	ready for designer	Handbook of Journalism Studies, et al	Elena

Cathy

Dr Catherine Strong
 Editor
 Teaching Journalism & Mass Communication Journal
<http://aejmc.us/spig/journal>